The Pacific Salmon Foundation is a federally-incorporated, non-profit organization dedicated to promoting the conservation, restoration, and enhancement of Pacific salmonids for the benefit of present and future generations.

Independent of government, but at the same time co-operating with provincial ministries and the federal Department of Fisheries and Oceans, the Foundation raises funds for salmonid enhancement projects. Those projects eligible for funding include: hatcheries; spawning channels; rearing channels and ponds; fish ways and fish ladders; incubation units; stream clearance and rehabilitation; bioreconnaissance; marking or tagging; outplanting; and classroom incubation projects.

Beginning this year, tidal water sport fishermen fishing for chinook salmon will be required to purchase a Chinook Salmon Conservation mint stamp with their fishing licences. The image depicted on this inaugural stamp, 'The Chinook,' a pastel by artist Robert Field, will be sold as limited edition prints and collectors' stamps, the proceeds going to support the Pacific Salmon Foundation's efforts in salmonid enhancement.
